ABOUT THE SOUTHWEST ONCOLOGY GROUP (SWOG)

Since 1956, SWOG has made invaluable contributions to the field of cancer treatment and prevention, supporting a network of over 7,500 physician-researchers, clinical research associates and nurse oncologists from 550 institutions throughout the United States.

SWOG member institutions are the most influential research sites in the country, including 17 NCI-designated cancer centers. All physicians meet strict medical and ethical requirements, and undergo intensive Study Coordinator training in order to conduct the Group's protocols.

SWOG's mission to eradicate cancer is achieved through cutting-edge clinical trials in treatment and prevention. Approximately 120 clinical trials are underway at any given time.

SWOG GROUP MEETINGS: EXHIBITOR PROGRAM

SWOG celebrates past successes and plans for an effective, bold and productive future in cancer clinical trials at biannual group meetings.

Along with critical plenary sessions, group meetings provide a forum to review progress, conduct Group business and determine future research directions. For over 30 years, these meetings have proven to be a vital aspect of the oncology-group model. They provide essential opportunities for physicians, researchers, statisticians and nurse oncologists to discuss trial progress and development, research and therapies in various fields of adult cancer treatment and prevention.

At each meeting, SWOG presents industry partners with the opportunity to exhibit their products and services over a two-day period. Benefits of participation include interaction with and exposure to over 1,300 oncology professionals per meeting, high-profile placement of display areas and inclusion of name and/or logo on meeting materials.
